

My Trip to Ghana November 2022

Our new classrooms look fantastic. They are painted brightly inside and out and used by 200 students. It has been an incredible achievement and only possible with KTCT funding.

Our new classrooms with our teachers outside!

Everyone, including the teachers and cooks are happy with the beautiful new classrooms. They safeguard children's education at Brightlingsea Academy throughout their Junior High School Education!

We have our own garden to help grow food! Many children who attend the Brightlingsea Academy walk many miles/hours to and from school and don't get an evening meal. It was fantastic to get stuck in and help prepare the free breakfast and lunch for the children which is all cooked over a few open fires. That's over 600 meals a day prepared without any electricity! Our School Cooks are truly determined ladies.

Children are healthy – It was beautiful to see children looking happy and healthy. They are flourishing at The Brightlingsea Academy.

Kwadwo, in the photo, was highly unwell during the Covid-19 Pandemic after his mother sought herbal treatment for sepsis.

We have taken a proactive role now, encouraging, and engaging parents to seek professional medical advice with the support of our teachers and staff.

Children love to help the teachers and arrive as early as 5:30 am to help prepare the school for the day ahead –

Children help the staff sweep for the day ahead at the crack of dawn. They sweep in unison and get an early breakfast. They are often the children who are hungry and can't get an evening meal from home. Breakfast comes early for them.

Solar Panels - 50% of our students don't have electricity after dark. We took three solar panels on our most recent trip and watched dark homes become light with the sound of the radio too. This is part of a three-month trial before deciding to fund more in other rural homes.

Thank you so very much to everyone who is involved with the work of The Kitchen Table Charities Trust. We couldn't have done this without you.
